Surfing the web for Kirra

ANOTHER milestone in the battle to bring back the legendary waves of Kirra Point has been achieved, with the Kirra Point Committee launching its website.

The new website, www.kirrapoint.org, is designed to take the committee's message of restoring Kirra to its former glory while maintaining coastal security to a global audience.

Committee member and Gold Coast surfing legend Wayne "Rabbit" Bartholomew said the group was committed to restoring their beloved break.

"The effects of excess sand build-up at Kirra has been discussed for many years, but the launch of this website shows how seriously the issue is now being taken by the entire community," Bartholomew said.

"The launch of the Kirra Point website is a wonderful achievement and a testament to the commitment of those involved have in seeing the current situation resolved," he said.
